An inmate, referred to as "A" in a video released by Hollywood police department shows two fingers pointing to the head of a male inmate he has just attacked. Los Angeles (AFP) - A manhunt is underway in the United States after a corrections officer at a jail in Virginia was punched and choked to death by an inmate who was hiding drugs in his rectum, police said on Wednesday. Media have nicknamed the inmate "A" in a video released by Hollywood police department that shows A flying off his bed in a shower room in his unit, grabbing a male inmate he then chokes and takes to the floor, where the victim falls to the ground in a pool of blood. A then walks to the second inmate in the video and says, "This is so I don't have to deal with him after this." "Because we don't know what the situation is inside the lockup, I cannot confirm whether A is a gang member," Officer Michael Davi told local media.

"Whether he is or is not, we want to find out," Davi said the officers could not just leave the second inmate in the shower room, because A would kill the inmate that way as well. Davi said he and a sergeant were trying to convince A to put down his makeshift weapon of shanks. "It's a sad ending for a correction officer, a sad end to what we all hoped would be a good career and we are all sad about it," Davi said.
